

Through relentless touring and intense live shows, Bury Tomorrow have emerged as the UK's premier Metalcore band, proving that the Brits can take on this genre with the same beauty and ferocity as their US counterparts.

Since self releasing their debut EP 'The Sleep of The Innocents', recorded at Outhouse Studios in Reading, UK (Architects, Enter Shikari, Funeral For A Friend), the quintet have made it their continuing mission to rise through the ranks of the metal scene on the weight of their blistering songs and their unprecedented love and connection with their fans.

In early 2009 the boys entered the studio to record their greatly anticipated debut full length release 'Portraits' with acclaimed producers Wellerhill (Johnny Truant, Gallows, Taking Back Sunday). The result is a stunning metalcore master class, with songs as vicious as they are serene, proving that the hype surrounding this band was well deserved.

The release of Portraits will see Bury Tomorrow finally thrust into the mainstream metal limelight and enable the continuation of their heavy touring schedule worldwide.
